Check out how the celebrities do it.

Anshul Chodha, 39, Architect

There should be seamless integration of landscape as well as interiors and services. Planning and designing are the first steps towards making a house beautiful.

Vinita Chaitanya, 50, Interior Designer

Try and keep your main pieces of furniture simple and straightforward. The aesthetic to be reflected can be achieved through accents and accessories. So for example, a basic grey chenille sofa could be coupled with a coffee table that has antique brass work or some intricate wood carving.

Anjum Jung, 43, Interior Designer

A dramatic piece of lighting really brings a room to life. The flooring should be a seamless expanse. Keeping different parts of the bedroom separate from each other helps promote relaxation. Try and keep dressing needs and clutter out of view.

Naresh Narsimhan, 50, Architect

A beautiful home should reflect the intangible views of the family that occupies it. A home should not be ostentatious - it should have its own character but be a part of the neighborhood as well. In other words, it should not stick out like a sore thumb.
